NEGROES, MULATTOS, QUADROONS AND OCTOORONS IN WASHINGTON.

Nearly One-third of the People of the District of Columbia are Colored—An Interview With Fred Douglass—Society and Culture in the Negro Race.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Of the 230,392 people in the District of Columbia in the census week of 1890, 75,697 were colored, and the proportion has varied but little from one-third at any time since the freedmen flocked here in such numbers during the war. The so called colored include every possible shade, from the purest African ebony down through griffe metis, mulatto, quadroon, octoroon, melanoid and leuco-melanoid, and there are even persons with less than the thirty-second part negro and yet known to have African blood in their veins. In like manner they include every grade of society and culture, and except for the fact that they hold none of the higher offices they present quite as many grades of rank as their white fellow citizens. Among their noted men are Frederick Douglass, John M. Lang-
